

Travelling while staying seated to the table!

A new idea brought to the city by young men full of passion, that could revolution the way we think about eating

Five friends from different places on earth decided to get together to open a restaurant that unites the experience of eating food from all around the world to witnessing the culture of the people of there through the waiters and the location.

Many people have been visiting it, and though it started by simply being just a dream shared by five friends, it has now become a reality involving around thirty people, including cooks that have decided to present their origins the way they prefer the most, so through food.

They are thinking of expanding their dream to other cities in both the US and Canada. In fact, there will soon be the opening of their new place in New York.

The New York Times wrote an article regarding this new project in view of the expansion of it, defining it as A new way of travelling and of visiting a new country in its purest form And the reviews on the website of the restaurant are all positive and full of expectations for the future expansions of it.

Today for News around the world, we interviewed one of the founders, that told us, “We had this dream since the university, where we met. We decided to work for some years to put away enough money to finally follow our dreams, and now that we did it I still cannot believe it ”
